

Energy Muse — site review

Decisions needed before launch · prepared 1 September 2026 · staging: energy-muse-workingfolder.vercel.app

FOUR THINGS ONLY ENERGY MUSE CAN ANSWER

These are the items holding up a finished handoff. Everything else on the site is built and live on staging.

1 Frequency generator prices

All seven generators currently carry the same price, $99.88. That figure is a placeholder we were asked to hold rather than a price checked against your catalogue.

Ask: Confirm $99.88 for all seven, or supply the real prices.

2 Is the 1111Hz generator still stocked?

The approved copy rewrite (Part 4) states plainly that Energy Muse offers seven fixed-frequency generators, including “1111Hz for manifestation mastery”. Your live shop currently lists six and omits it. We have followed the copy document and built all seven, with 1111Hz marked out of stock.

Ask: Confirm 1111Hz is a real product, and whether it is available or discontinued.

3 The 639Hz product link

On your current site, the link for the 639Hz generator appears to point at the 417Hz product page. Almost certainly a fault on that side rather than a deliberate redirect. Ours follows the naming pattern the other six use.

Ask: Confirm the correct destination for 639Hz so we are not copying a broken link.

4 Where should form submissions go?

Five forms are built, validated and styled, but nothing is delivering yet — there is no endpoint to send to. They are: the footer email capture (site-wide), the Veza waitlist on the homepage and on /veza/, the support enquiry form, and the session request on /heather/.

A single endpoint wires all five at once — Klaviyo, Mailchimp, a Shopify form, or an email inbox. Roughly a ten-minute change once the destination is known.

Ask: Name the destination, or the platform you want them to land in.

COPY OWNERSHIP — WORTH A DECISION

The approved copy rewrite covers the homepage only — fifteen numbered sections, from the announcement bar to the email capture. Those are implemented against the approved text.

Every other page’s words are ours, written in your voice but never reviewed by you. That includes the Learning Center, the five intention landings, /about/, /craft/, the FAQ answers beyond the eight you approved, and all product descriptions not taken verbatim from your Shopify listings.

Ask: who reviews the non-homepage copy, and by when? The Learning Center is the largest block and the one most likely to need your voice on it.

TWO QUESTIONS ABOUT “WAYS TO BEGIN”

5a Does the section stay?

This is section 4 of the approved rewrite, so it is your copy and your call — we are not proposing to cut approved work. But it is worth putting the finding in front of you: on the homepage as built, every one of its four destinations is already reached from another section, and two of them from the sections directly on either side of it.

Links to	Also reached from, on the same page
Explore Frequency	“Frequency, made simple.” — the section immediately before it
Shop Jewelry	“Wear your energy.” — the section immediately after it
Shop Crystals	“One for each intention.”
Take the Quiz	the hero, the intention grid, and “Not sure where to begin?” — plus the announcement bar and the main nav

On a phone the section is about three quarters of a screen. Removing it would shorten the homepage without losing a single destination. Keeping it is entirely reasonable too — a summary of routes has its own value, and some readers want the menu.

Ask: keep it, or drop it now that the sections around it cover the same four places?

5b If it stays — approved wording, or the tightened version?

The approved rewrite specifies the headline “Your first step can be simple.” and four entries with full sentences. What is built uses “Ways to begin.” and shorter versions of the same four. All four destinations match the approved document exactly; the difference is length and headline, not substance. The shorter copy was written to fit a phone screen.

Ask: Keep the tightened version, or restore the approved wording verbatim?

WHERE THE BUILD IS

Pages	27 built and live on staging
Catalogue	140 products — 83 crystals, 35 jewelry, 15 kits & sets, 7 frequency generators
Stock	10 products marked out of stock, taken from your own live product feed
Sizes	37 products carry sizes and dimensions, matching how your listings show them
Prices	Checked against your live product feed. Four disagreed and were corrected to match yours.
Checkout	Deliberately unwired. This is a design prototype; the bag and checkout belong to Shopify at migration.

Nothing in the catalogue is invented. Every product name, price and photograph comes from your Shopify listings; crystal descriptions come from the site's own gem viewer and jewelry descriptions are yours.

Items 1 to 4 are the only things standing between this and a finished handoff. Question 5 and the copy review can follow afterwards without holding up a launch.
